I have questions concerning Federal Crop Insurance. In the provisions for Crop Hail Insurance, it says we have 5 years for litigation. Does that carry over to regular crop insurance? The provisions there only one year seems to be provided. This does not seem equal justice. Even normal litigation has a two year statute of limitation. Are they allowed to make their own rules that are contrary to normal rules of justice?

What can you do about ajusters and their supervisors that can not tell the difference between a deer and a cow? Wayne Mountford and Ken Peterson in particular. I am referring to the drought and hail weather of 2003.

Arbitration is not for farmers, only for attorneys and unions
