Question1: I feel that the CRP program has little or nothing to do with higher land prices. All the program has done is idle those acres which are highly erodible and should not have been farmed in the first place. The benefits of better soil and water quality outweigh the effect on land prices, if any.

Question4: I feel very strongly that the CRP program should be continued and expanded. In this area it has been wildly successful in increasing upland bird numbers, improving soil and water quality and benefiting tourism. I do think the program should be " tweaked " to weed out those farmers who seem to have an annual emergency and want to hay or graze the CRP ground. That should be forbidden.
