Question1: Eliminate the subsidies that drive up prices of products as well as land. New Zeland and Australia are good examples of the results of eliminating subsidies. Futures markets were provided for offsetting both farmer and producer price swings. We could help farmers use those markets rather than costly hand-outs.

Question2: Educate farmers in growing and marketing techniques for crops that grow easily in their regions while making trade more free. We can no longer take a "separatist" attitude in world agriculture or any type of relationship.
