

From: "chuckboust@yahoo.com%inter2" <chuckboust@yahoo.com>
Subject: Farm Bill 2007 Official Comments - 08/11/2005 09:22 PM CDT
Date Sent: 08/11/2005 09:22:28 CDT
Date Received: 08/12/2005 07:07:15 CDT

Email: chuckboust@yahoo.com

FirstName: Chuck

LastName: Boust

Address1: 290 Center Rd

Address2:

City: Newvile

State: Pennsylvania

zipcode: 17241

Question1: Is not farming/agriculture a business? Businesses survive in free markets by satisfying their customers, which usually means providing a good (better than average) product at a good (less than generally expected) price. Open & fair competition ensures this.

Question2: Let market forces work. George Bush said "Bring it on" to the terrorists, I say the same applies to would be foreign competitors in any venture. Fair markets (no tariffs or protectionism) is the best approach to better results in any enterprise.

Question3: See questions 1 & 2. Free markets = free people = better and more efficient allocation of resources and better decisions regarding business expenditures.

Question4: The consumer should dictate the requirements for environmental issues. Most people want environmentally friendly practices employed when producing the goods and services we consume. I doubt environmentally destructive agriculture practices would long survive in a competitive environment.

Question5: Stop the subsidies! That may include road building at tax payer expense also, but that's another battle to fight.

Question6: Again, let the consumers and producers decide based on cost and demand. Why is government involvement required here?