

From: "felawlor@juno.com%inter2" <felawlor@juno.com>
Subject: Farm Bill 2007 Official Comments - 08/01/2005 09:36 PM CDT
Date Sent: 08/01/2005 09:36:01 CDT
Date Received: 08/01/2005 09:37:02 CDT

Email: felawlor@juno.com

FirstName: Francis E

LastName: Lawlor

Address1: 15224 El Casco Street

Address2: P.O.Box 922285

City: Sylmar

State: California

zipcode: 91392

Question1: Too much of farm subsidy is going to corporate farming instead of helping the smaller family farmer. Isn't there a better way to sort this out ?

Question2: Efficiency and flexibility of the small farming unit will keep U.S. agriculture competitive.

Question3: Just as there is an arrangement to protect the smaller income from taxation an adjustment of subsidies should favor the smaller farmer.

Question4: The small farmer has great respect for his LAND and its continued productivity. That makes information on conservation as well as environment vital. Again a matter of access to sources not easily available to the small farmer.

Question5: My father moved his family from a large city to the country to develop good citizenship and work habits. He continued to work for wages in an agricultural related business while his five sons did all the manual labor under his direction. This sort of arrangement should be encouraged.

Question6: The trend toward higher value crops should certainly continue to be encouraged to increase farm income.

This can be done by providing small farmers with information they may not now have access to.