Question1: Please encourage farmers to transition to organics (Monsato is bad business). People WILL pay the extra dime for it. It makes sense to do so both economically and environmentally (not to mention public health!) Also, agribusiness needs to understand that the american public does not want to be complicit to animal cruelty. Therefore, it's essential that the industry start overhauling its animal husbandry methods to provide for truly humane development and slaughter, ie- organic, cage-free animals.

Question2: Go organic- the demand is going to be huge! We also want to see heirlooms, not this generic, tasteless garbage that is on the shelves.

Question3: The bigger the farm, the greater their profit, the less subsidy that should need.

Question4: Go organic! No pesticide, herbicide, fungicide residue in our waters :) NO GMO's!!!!!!!!!!

Question5:

Question6: I agree with the above suggestions.
