Question1: The United States Government should not be in the farm business. Remove and kill the farm bill in its current form. Subsidies to large agricultural corporations do not benefit the small family owned farmer. Allow free enterprise - it's what we founded this country on.

Question2: If government leaves farmers alone, they will grow products that are in high demand and stop growing products nobody wants. Subsidies encourage farmers to grow even when there is low demand or surplus. Let farmers adapt to the international demands by producing what is demanded without government interference. Those that adapt will prosper. That's the way it's supposed to work.

Question3: don't do it

Question4: Help farmers who take active roles in promoting healthy, environmentally responsible methods by giving them tax incentives. You cannot force small farms to purchase expensive purification systems and other equipment to meet standards. Use a system of rewards not punitive actions.

Question5: Without the expensive subsidies, the government will have money to invest in technology.

Question6:
