Question1: The government has failed to protect the very lands that make up this country and pitted one group of producers against another.

Without a clear and equitable land use planning guide to prevent chemicals from permantently stealing the soils ability to produce and remain in place the grain farmers will pollute the gulf and destroy the coastal fishing industry.USDA has failed to address this reality saying it is an EPA issue safe food is everybody's job.Land planning will allow supervision of REIT's to include new or beginning farmers instead of exclusion.USDA under economicand rural developement should return to local control and eliminate the nonregulation of multinational companies.Coke and Pepsi both have been found guilty of product manufacture in other countries that don't meet local regulations for safety.Treating farmers as second class citizens, and not recognizing their investment in food production is wrong

Question2: It should be simple stupid. When farmers are included in the food production chain and the risks are fairly judged and profits shared according to risks all farmers around the world will share in the record profits now enjoyed by the few multinationals that can destroy national security bycripling our troops food and water supplies.

Question3: When the total investment in agriculture is applied equally without prejudice.

There should be no difference in investing in land machinery and livestock than a piece of paper called stock.

When USDA looks at risk and sustainable incomes based on profit sharing per risk involved then the farm program and human need for food will be just and fair for all.

Question4: When you poison the land everything dies.Land planning and conservation for maximum quality are essential.

Until we get space exploration on a commercial basis this earth is all we got and what happens to it affects us all.

Question5: Wake up Multinationals are not nationally oriented.Homeland security says we are doing this all wrong.

We can't produce our own food because of USDA regulations.

Question6: Allow the market to work, equally and fairly for all who participate.

People can only get as far away from agriculture as their last meal.

If I want to grow corn for gasoline or electric generation great but I should get paid a fair price for that product.

If I grow corn for human consumption I should get a fair price for that.

Commodity pricing will not work into the future of this or any other country.
