Question1: Let the farmers farm and the free markets alone.

Question2: To maximize U.S. competitiveness, the government should quit subsidizing agribusiness and just let the farmers and taxpayers alone!

Question3: The best and fairest farm policy would be to not distribute assistance to any producers. If they do not produce at a profit, then they should be allowed to fail and do something else with their lives.

Question4: Through enhancement of private ownership as talked about in numerous CATO think-tank publications.

Question5: Federal programs cannot provide effective assistance in any area. Communist Russia tried it before us and failed. It does not work.

"Effective assistance" from the federal government is an oxymoron.

Question6: It should not be. It is none of the damn government's business. Expressed a little less savagely, there certainly is no constitutional basis for any of this pure-and-simple meddling.
