Question1: The BEst way to answer these problems is to let market functions dictate how much land should be used for farm production, and get rid of the obstacles that hinder people from either producing more, if needed, or less, if there is a surplus.

Question2: End Farm Subsidies, get rid of trade barriers that hinder US products from entering other foreign markets. Don't you think other countries will put up roadblocks for our products, if we do the same to theirs? Think about it!!

Question3: Let consumers, who buy in the marketplace, take this function, instead of bureaucrats, who don't work on farms.

Question4: Strengthen private property rights. Private property is the best of friend of the environment.

Question5: By ending subsidies, you stop encouraging firms like Archer Daniels Midland, and other farm conglomerates from buying up smaller farms. Small farms can't compete in this environment.

Question6: They shouldn't. YOU will most likely throw more money in this field, and it will be stagnant. YOU don't encourage innovation, you encourage dependency. Let the market take care of this.

By incentives in the marketplace, producers will have the incentive to produce better, healthier, and cheaper products for consumers. You really need to get out of this field. You've have done nothing but make food more expensive, and have soaked taxpayers for years with little or nothing to show for it.
