Question1:

Question2: The impact on economies of of small countries must not be adversely affected by the dumping of subsidized American products on their markets. For example, many farmers in the improverished countries of Central America are having to abandon their farms as a result of subsidized American corn invading their markets. This results in more illegal immigration to the U.S. by people who have lost the ability to live off of the land.

Question3: No assistance should be provided to corporate farms.

Assistance should be limited to individual farmers with income below a reasonable predetermined cap.

Question4: Intensive factory-scale farming should be discouraged, as it is consistently found to be harmful to the environment and encourages cruel practices.

Question5: Assistance should be focused on smaller farms which are most likely to help sustain rural America.

Question6: Care must be exercized to make sure that terms such as "organic" do not become distored so as to lose credibility with the American consumer.
