Question3:

Question4: The urban and community forestry program has been a major stimulus in assisting community revitalization. In the western part of the U. S. community trees were generally planted 100 years ago and are on the decline. Therefore, in order to enhance economic growth and achieve environmental benefits afforded by trees, this program is extremely important. Re-establishing (where necessary) and continuing this program is vitally important in our smaller communities.

Question5: The community forest is a vital infrastructure in our rural communities and should be addressed in this bill. The proper management of the urban forest resource is fundamental to economic growth in our smaller cities and towns.
