Dear Mike Johanns

A great need exists to expand the knowledge and practices of community supported agriculture as an option to the large agri-businesses. When the large agri-businesses start to falter in times of economic downturn and higher fuel costs then it will be the job of the community to produce its own food and if each community knows to have its food system in place then no one will have to starve . There are lots of starving people in Amerika as we speak.

We cannot live on meat alone but we can produce a variety of vegetables and meat that will sustain us. Community is where we are raised.

Thanks,

Mr. Robin Reed
