Question3:

Question4: The FLEP program is the best way to achieve conservation goals. Motivating farmers to do the right long term conservation practices is difficult without some assistance. The FLEP program helps keep some focus on forestry for the future. Also many states have cut back or almost eliminate their forest incentives. The federal govt is the sometimes the only avenue for cost share for forestry practices. Money from FLEP is more likely to be spent more wisely than other programs. It will be administered by foresters for forestry. Remember foresters are conservative by nature and donot like seeing things wasted.
