Question1:

Question2: Since the tobacco buyout of 2004 none of the tobacco that is imported from other countries has to be accounted for or checked for dangerous pesticides and other chemicals by USDA people. Our farmers are held to strict policies on what chemicals they can use and the amount they can plant, not only are the standards unfair to our farmers the health issues of the tobacco coming in laced with DDT and other chemicals banned here should be a major concern, but it is never mentioned. Why is it not mentioned?
