Gentlemen: I would hope that you are in support of the family farmer and the small farmer that work the land out of the pleasure and reward it gives them to produce food that they take great pride in. Right now, in Florida, the State has shut down a small farmer who is brave enough to provide to a few customers milk, cheese, butter and meat that he grows organically. He has not had any complaints from his customers. This was written up in the Tallahassee Democrat newspaper. I think it is the wrong direction for the health of the country to stop this type of endeavor in favor to the multi story milk cow barns which shorten the life span of cows by many years. These imprisoned cows cannot give wholesome food. Ever wonder why milk in Jacksonville Florida tastes the same as milk in Chicago? The grass isn't the same, Of course silly me, they don't eat grass. Thank you, GWE
