Question1: Except for natural disasters, farm subsidies should stop!
How ridiculous is it for anyone to get paid for NOT raising something???
Come on! This country was settled and made great by people who were willing to work hard to provide something that others needed; it needs to get back to that!

Question2: Our quality standards should not be so stringent that they shackle us as producers! Our government insists that we produce only the safest and cleanest food products for domestic and export markets--and we certainly should do that! But our country also needs to exclude importing other countries' like products that do not keep equivalent regulations that we must live up to. How difficult is that to understand???

Question3: They should be temporary in nature at MOST, being phased out in five or fewer years to any one producer for anything. By that time, if a farm is not making enough money to be self-sustaining, then it needs to raise something else that there's a market for. This will encourage self-sufficiency in our producers and make them do some research and put some brain-power into their own actions. They need to learn to swim or sink!!!

Question4: Monitor the streams, which you're already doing in this area, for erosion and pollution. Where producers are doing a good job, give them acclaim and set them up as examples for others to emulate and seek advice from. Keep tax money from being spent on ineffective programs that encourage dependency on financial handouts and tell the WTO to jump off a cliff! We dare not hand over authority to any world power!!!

Question5: Get out of them!!!! Government's job is supposed to be to protect this country's citizens from attack and invasion--from outside or wherever. If it would get back to that, and DO THAT JOB for a change, and get out of the daily lives of its citizens, this country could become strong and healthy again.

Question6: Operate only in overseeing quality control and let the private sector handle all of the above. We do NOT NEED more government!!!
