Question1: We need to attract more young people to the industry of agriculture. We need to attract people who understand production agriculture and therefore understand agribusiness in order to meet the employment needs of our industry.

The next generation of agriculturalists needs quality and up to date programs of instruction and career and leadership development in our high schools, technical schools, county colleges and universities.

To leave the funding of Agriculture Education programs, across the nation, in the hands of decision makers who do not understand or appreciate Agriculture will lead to the demise of our agricultural education and FFA programs. The programs will not grow, evolve or expand to educate and train enough people for the entire industry of agriculture, food and natural resources if we do not begin to invest in them at the local level. We need to attract well train agricultural educators to our schools and equip the schools with equipment that reflects current and future technology of the industry. We need to project exciting careers in the science, business and technology of agriculture and communicate them to students, parents, school administrators and local and state decision makers.

As we continue to preserve farmland and open space, we need to invest in our future by financially supporting agricultural education programs. Farm policy/ agriculture policy needs to address agriculture's investment in education, our future.
