

From: "arborcon@hutchtel.net%inter2" <arborcon@hutchtel.net>
Subject: Farm Bill 2007 Official Comments - 11/16/2005 01:04 PM CST
Date Sent: 11/16/2005 01:04:31 CST
Date Received: 11/16/2005 01:05:45 CST

Email: arborcon@hutchtel.net

FirstName: Mark

LastName: Schnobrich

Address1: 24209 Unit Ave & Belle Lake Road

Address2:

City: Hutchinson,

State: Minnesota

zipcode: 55350

Question1: Development and wealthy hunting groups are a part of the overly inflationary rise in land costs. Without agricultural land we will continue to import more food than we export, as is the case today. We no longer feed the world. But everyone must contribute or pay for development via tax incentives to stay on the land. Otherwise the aging farm pop. will inevitably just sell out for inflated land prices as their lasting investment for retirement.

Question2:

Question3: Current farm support system encourages increases in farm size and results in the disproportionate distribution of program benefits to large farms. Just what corporate agricultural wants. The problem is that distribution of wealth is being concentrated in too few hands. You don't achieve community growth and economic equality by allowing very large scale farming operations to collect so much subsidy. You must cap large monetary subsidies to the largest corporate producers.

Question4:

Question5:

Question6: