Question3:

Question4: I would love to see more regulation in regards to large factory farms. They edge out the smaller ones, are more inherently cruel, and produce the most environmental pollution. Are there new ways to promote smaller farms through tax breaks and other encouragements for these small operations. Conversely, I wish larger operations could face very strict environmental and humane farming laws!

Question5: As mentioned before, I feel we strongly need to encourage the small operations and make the large ones adhere to the strictest possible regulations to help impose humanity and ecology to farming.

Question6: It would be great if somehow we subsidized stores who carry organics so that the price could be more comparable to conventionally produced items. Obviously, organics are healthier for everyone, so let's encourage this form of farming as much as possible.
