Question1: Please see my comments at questions 2, 3 & 4.

Question2: Farm policy must stop avoiding its responsibility to animals, people and the environment. If farm animals were treated more humanely at the farm, during transport and during slaughter there would be less disease, less environmental contamination, and less people suffering from the effects of factory farms (polluted air and water, poor working conditions on factory farms and at slaughterhouses, diseased meat, antibiotic resistance, hormone additions). The most animals in the least amount of space is an irresponsible, unethical and environmentally destructive system. The U.S. must compete on a new level, that of the most humane farming practices and highest environmental standards in the world. Globally, people will then be able to trust our standards and purchase with confidence.

Question3: End subsidies that benefit large producers! This policy is grossly unfair to the small farmer and has destroyed the livelihoods of hundreds of thousands of family farms in our country.

Question4: End factory farms! These behemoths cause unfathomable suffering for billions of sentient beings every year. They contribute to environmental destruction and human illnesses and deaths on a scale that was impossible when farms were smaller and spread out across the country.
