

From: "bananakaboom@yahoo.com%inter2" <bananakaboom@yahoo.com>
Subject: Farm Bill 2007 Official Comments - 12/05/2005 07:38 PM CST
Date Sent: 12/05/2005 07:38:17 CST
Date Received: 12/05/2005 07:39:42 CST

Email: bananakaboom@yahoo.com

FirstName: Jason

LastName: Williams

Address1: 55 Meyer Avenue

Address2:

City: Poughkeepsie

State: New York

zipcode: 12603

Question1: Break up corporate farms so that the family farms have a chance once again. Also, offer subsidies to family farmers who don't use hormones in their animals so that the animals are not regarded as object. Family farmers treat their animals better and that is better for everyone involved.

Question2: Well, I sincerely doubt everyone is interested in eating factory farmed meat from animals that are given hormones and other drugs to speed up growth (unhealthily). With the obesity pandemic as large as it is in this country (and one can only assume in other countries), focus on foods such as fruits and vegetables that are more inexpensive and "extras" can be given to poor countries (Eg. Africa) that cannot supply itself enough food to survive.

Question3: The current trend in general, from farm to business, seems to be towards larger and deregulated entities. That is quite unfortunate for everyone in the end. Granted, we all pay lower prices as gargantuan companies usurp all niches of all markets and eliminates all competition, but that trend will soon reverse as the large corporations become monopolies.

Question4: Less meats, more vegetables and fruits and breads.

Question5: Step in and stop developers from developing every square inch of open space. This is quite an epidemic in the upstate NY area. Then people wonder why there are so many animals and other displaced wildlife wandering in their yards. Duh.

Question6: Focus on high-output, inexpensive, healthy goods such as fruits, vegetables, breads, and offer incentives for those goods. Also offer incentives for meats not to be treated as they are now (confined, overdugged).