Question1:

Question2: The United States should stay competitive with other countries by ensuring the safety of the food supply. Animal welfare is tied to this issue, in terms of sick or downed animals. Our animal welfare standards are abysmal, and the global demand for humanely raised meat and poultry will continue to increase.

Question3: Current subsidy programs benefit large factory farms. As a taxpayer, I am outraged that my tax dollars help make possible the cruel farming practices I boycott.

Question4: By reducing factory farming, the United States agriculture industry could have a positive effect on environmental issues, especially pollution. Factory farming as it is practiced now has a terrible environmental cost.
