Question1: There should be tax benefits. If a person enters into farming, and produces food at a high rate (there can be different rates set for beginner farmers, as they will begin producing at lower rates) then there should be a really good tax benefit.

Question2: The amount of produce from foreign countries should be limited. We should import less than we export. Limitation will insure that this happens

Question3: Workers should go to farms and see the farm workers in action. If the farm receives a high rating, then the farm should receive more assistance. Lower rating farms could receive help from officials and tips on how to improve their rating so that they can get more assistance the next year.

Question4: Make laws about animal products and byproducts. For example, there should be more policies for how animal waste is taken care of, because cow waste getting into the water system is linked to memory loss.

Question5: Support local farmers with gov. assistance, which can include anything from seeds, to technologies, to money.

Question6: Due to the change in demand for higher quality, healthier, more humane and ecologically sound productions of food; and in order to support citizens of the US whom seek local and healthy foods; and in light of new technology: we hereby instate this new farm bill in favor of protecting the health, wants, needs and desires of the citizens of the United States of America.
