Question1: The US Govt could offer low cost loans with repayment based on income levels to help new farmers start out. These loans should not be offered to the big corporation that control the majority of our farm industry now.

Question2: They should research to see what product demand could be in the future before they develop their policy. We need to see if the other countries are offering subsidy (money support) to their companies and act accordly for our companies.

Question3: I think the programs should be based on income levels adjusted for farm size (profit/loss statement). The prodcuers that do not need the help should not receive it.

Question4: I do not think farm programs should be expanded into private forest land unless the program protects the private forest lands from future developments. Between housing development and agriculture expansion wildlife habitat is disappearing at an alarming rate. I think both development agriculture and housing should be required to leave land for wildlife and enviromental protections.

Question5: Provide low cost loans to help expand.

Question6: Yes, I think greater support should be given to the above.
