Question1: I'm a private forest landowner and in the past several years most cost share programs are not funded or funding withdrawn. This is very discouraging to someone trying to practice sustainable forestry and pass something on to future generations. Enhancing your forest land is very difficult on a fixed income.

Question2: To promote certified wood products and insure the playing field is level across the board.

Question3: The family farm has to be able to survive either through subsidies or tax relief.

Question4: By providing consistent help to private forest landowners so they can continue to practice good forest stewardship.

Question5: By providing education programs to schools and local governments so rural communities are pulling in the same direction.

Question6: Through cost sharing with Universities and local organizations that help upgrade the skills and knowledge of the private landowners.
