

KATE HOUSTON

Kate J. Houston is Director of Government Relations & Policy for Cargill, Inc, a global producer and marketer of food, agricultural, financial, and industrial products and services based in Wayzata, Minnesota. Ms. Houston advises Cargill's food and ingredient businesses on critical issues in food safety and nutrition—two public health imperatives important to Cargill's long-term success. Houston also served as the Deputy Under Secretary for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food, Nutrition and Consumer Services mission area, and as a policy advisor to the House of Representative's Education and the Workforce Committee under the leadership of John A. Boehner where she worked to enact bipartisan legislation reauthorizing Child Nutrition and WIC

Programs, Head Start, and the Older American Act. She holds degrees from Tulane University and the Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy at Tufts University and is a Board Member of the Congressional Hunger Center, The International Food Information Council, and Common Threads DC, a non-profit organization preventing obesity by teaching low-income children to cook healthy meals.

Paul Westcott is an agricultural economist with USDA's Economic Research Service (ERS). His current activities include coordination and preparation of USDA's long-term (10-year) agricultural baseline projections, analysis of effects of biofuels on agriculture, and analysis of other commodity market issues. Paul joined ERS in 1977. During his career, he has worked on a variety of topics including retail food prices and food consumption analysis, farm-commodity market analysis, and U.S. agricultural policy analysis. Prior to joining ERS, Paul worked for two years at the Council of Economic Advisers. He received an M.A. in economics from the University of Rochester and a B.A. in economics and mathematics, also from the University of Rochester.
