

COLIN ILES

After a brief stint in the City of London Colin Iles began his career in the cotton industry in 1995 with Cargill Cotton. His major focus was trading African origin cotton which led in 2006 to a posting to Johannesburg to run Cargill's Southern and East African ginning businesses.

In 2008 Colin moved to Cargill Cotton's headquarters in the US to become their Global Trading Manager, a position he held for nearly three years until, in 2011, he transferred to Cargill's Geneva office to take up an opportunity to lead Cargill's Sugar

Trading desk.

Shortly afterwards Colin enjoyed a Damascene conversion and after 16 fruitful years he joined Glencore to head up their cotton business, working out of their office in Rotterdam, The Netherlands.

Colin lives in Leidschendam, The Netherlands, with his wife and two young sons. He is an Alumnus of the London School of Economics.
