

David P. Anderson

David Anderson is a Professor and Extension Economist – Livestock Economist -- with the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service. His work involves the analysis of livestock market economics and policy. He has authored or co-authored more than 600 journal articles, publications, symposiums, presented papers, popular press, and other articles. He has chaired or co-chaired 25 graduate student's research committees and been a member of 50 other graduate student committees. For the past 16 years he has taught Agricultural Economics 614, Ag Policy. He has received awards from the American, Western, and Southern Agricultural Economics Associations for quality of research and Extension programs. He is originally from Coolidge, Arizona where his father is a cotton farmer.