

Jennifer Ifft
Cornell University

Jennifer Ifft is an assistant professor and Mueller Family Sesquicentennial Faculty Fellow in Farm and Agribusiness Management in the Charles H. Dyson School of Applied Economics and Management at Cornell University. Her research program covers agricultural finance and risk management and farm labor issues. Her extension program focuses on risk management education and supporting adaptation to policy and regulatory changes. Prior to joining Cornell, Professor Ifft worked at the USDA Economic Research Service. She received her PhD at the University of California Berkeley and an MPhil at the University of Cambridge as a Gates Cambridge Scholar. She grew up in central Illinois, where her family still operates a grain and hog farm.
