

Lyman Stone

Lyman Stone is an economist at the United States Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service in Washington, DC. He analyzes global supply and demand of cotton, with a particular focus on Africa, the Middle East, and Central Asia. He also contributes to the World Agricultural Supply and Demand Estimates for cotton, as well as supporting the administration of USDA policies related to cotton. Before working at USDA, Lyman's background was in U.S. state tax policy. He holds a master's degree in International Trade and Investment Policy from The George Washington University.