

Shayle Shagam

Shayle Shagam is the livestock, poultry, and dairy analyst for USDA's World Agricultural Outlook Board where he chairs the committees responsible for USDA's meat and dairy supply, use and price forecasts. Shayle joined the World Agricultural Outlook Board in September 1998 and became Chair of the Estimates Committees in February 1999. Prior to joining the World Agricultural Outlook Board, he worked for 12 years as an international livestock analyst responsible for red meat trade forecasts and animal product trade issues with the Animal Products Branch of USDA's Economic Research Service. He has a BS in Agricultural Economics from the University of Illinois and an MS in Agricultural Economics from Michigan State University.