

Tyler Mark

Tyler Mark is an associate professor of production economics in the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University of Kentucky, United States. His applied research interests include broadband availability in rural areas, precision agriculture, precision dairy, dairy policy, renewable energy feedstocks, and hemp economics. Current projects include factors that impact the profitability of farmers, broadband internet's impact on precision agriculture data transmission, and the economic aspects of hemp production.