The USDA has a history of racial discrimination and inequity.

USDA civil rights and court actions in the 1960s have documented a long history of discrimination against farmers and farmworkers from underserved groups, particularly Black, Native, and Hispanic farmers, through institutional practices and the administration of credit programs.
Definitions

- Equity means the consistent and systematic fair, just, and impartial treatment of all individuals, including individuals who belong to underserved communities that have been denied such treatment.

- Racial equity includes underserved communities such as Black, Latino, Indigenous and Native American persons, Asian Americans, Native Hawaiians and Pacific Islanders, Alaska Natives and other persons of color.

- The Equity Commission is instructed to also address systemic equity so that underserved communities such as members of religious minorities; lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer (LGBTQ+) persons; persons with disabilities; persons who live in rural areas; and persons otherwise adversely affected by persistent poverty or inequality are proactively and consistently included.

The Agriculture Subcommittee will be charged with providing recommendations on issues and concerns related to agriculture and on how to optimize USDA programs to advance equity.
1. In consultation and with support from the DFO, convene to achieve the goals directed by the Equity Commission.

2. Leverage the diversity of expertise, perspectives, and ideas within the Subcommittee membership to meaningfully drive the right conversation, analyze issues, and prioritize short and long-term recommendations.

3. Identify the primary and systemic barriers that underserved producers (farmers, ranchers, forest landowners and operators, cooperatives, and farmworkers) face today.

4. In conjunction with the Deputy Secretary, DFO, and other USDA resources, determine if these barriers require administrative, discretionary, regulatory, or statutory remedies.

5. Develop and provide a report to the Equity Commission for consideration.
Based on stakeholder input and ongoing equity efforts within USDA, the following are recommended as important goals to consider:

1. Improving technical assistance necessary for navigating USDA programs and services;
2. Improving access to capital;
3. Improving access to programs and services related to agriculture and land use;
4. Implementing programs and services to mitigate effects of climate change, including improvements in risk management, conservation, and forestry programs;
5. Addressing access to land, including financing programs and addressing unique issues related to heirs’ property, fractionated land, and other land access/retention issues;
6. Increasing market access to facilitate expanded access for value added opportunities (e.g., processing, trade, marketing);
7. Enhancing customer service via improved USDA staffing, training, and transformation of the organizational culture within USDA;
8. Reviewing supporting functions such as county committees, conservation districts, and advisory boards;
9. Improving use of data and technology both to ensure access and to increase accountability;
